Evaluation

Functionality

Application functions as expected. There were a few failed test cases, but these were minor issues that were easily resolved.

Some form fields were not required as expected and, on the contact form, the form would submit anyway due to some inline JavaScript which was removed without impacting any existing functionality and resolving the issue with submitting empty fields. An error when logging in with invalid details occurred as the server would attempt to render a route which did not exist.

Security

Application blocks access to certain features if user is not signed in and cross site scripting is not possible on form fields. The user session also times out after 8 minutes and 20 seconds which will prevent unauthorised users from interacting with the application the way staff should be able to if they find an unlocked terminal after this time frame. Errors are provided if the session times out or if a user attempts to directly access a route without logging in

Responsiveness

While the website is responsive, some of the design is not as aesthetically pleasing on smaller viewports, particularly the forms. It does not impact functionality, however.

Improvements

Further security testing and user acceptance testing would increase the validity of results. User acceptance testing would also validate the website's accessibility.

ABOUT

Philosophy

The restaurant was named after visiting Thailand. We were taken by its unique look, vibrant culture and beautiful food.

At Thai Tanic we serve a seasonally changing multi-course menu inspired by our network of small artisan producers, foragers and farmers.

The kitchen, headed up by Peter Mckenna, blends traditional and contemporary technique creating a distinctly modern Thai fine dining experience.

Kevin Dow leads the front of house team with a style that is informal, relaxed but informed. A true reflection of the charm that Belfast is widely known for.

Our wine list is compact, made up of modern and classic styles from both the old and new world, with a emphasis on small scale, artisanal growers.
